UMass Lowell will be celebrating spring with a new program. The Activities Commission (AC), which is a branch of the Student Government Association (SGA), has planned a weeks worth of activities for UMass Lowell students. University Day is the last Friday in April and traditionally is a day in which classes are cancelled by the administration. The AC has planned our annual Spring Carnival for this day and much more. The programs have been extended to cover the whole week, which will now be known as Spring Carnival week. All the events are free to UMass Lowell students and geared towards entertaining you—the student body.

SGA seats to be left vacant

cers have taken their places. Not all of the positions have been filled, however.

SGA seats are broken down into three categories. There are seven senate positions for each of the freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior classes. All are voting members. The five executive board positions, which consist of the President, Vice-President, Treasurer, Secretary, and Student Trustee, preside over the Senate, and are all voting members (the President only votes in case of a tie). Appointments to any unfilled positions are usually handled after the election. This year, the Governance Committee (composed of SGA Senators) decided to wait until after the fall elections to make the appointments. The reasoning behind this is that anyone appointed now would have to run in the fall elections anyway. Anyone who

The free positions for the class of '94 are three senate seats with all class officer positions filled. The class of '95 has four senate seats open, and no one as Secretary or Treasurer. The class of '96 needs three Senators, a Secretary, and a Treasurer. The class of '97 will be filled by the incoming freshmen, and the class of '93 no longer holds any positions.

MassPIRG & Earth Day

by James A. Kimble

MassPIRG held a press conference on Earth Day April 22, 1993 on the South Campus quad. The conference was held to announce the launching of the PIRG's National Bottle Bill Campaign. Local radio stations WLLH and WCAP attended, along with local Cable Channel 6. MassPIRG member Jeff Nazzaro announced the start of the "Bottles to Bill, Cans to Clinton Campaign" as a part of the National Bottle Bill Campaign. "We are asking concerned students and citizens to send bottles and cans to the White House as a demonstration of the necessity of a National Bottle Bill," Nazzaro said.

80%-90% of all bottles and cans with deposits are returned according to National General Accounting Office (GAO) most of glass and plastic recycled nationwide comes from deposit returns and 40% of aluminum. To officially kick off the campaign MassPIRG released the latest data on anti-bottle bill PAC money given to candidates for Congress over the last two election cycles. The data reveals that:
- 15 special interest PAC's gave over $6 million to Congressional candidates between 1989-1992.

- The largest contributors, National Beer Wholesalers Association, RJR Nabisco, Inc., and Phillips Morris Co. (owners of Miller Brewing Co.), each contributed over a $1 million.

The Bottle Bill has been introduced every Congress for the last 20 years. However, until U.S. PIRG launched it's

WJUL seeking new heights with tower

by Jeff Nazzaro
Connector Staff

WJUL, UMass Lowell's radio station, is set to move their transmission facilities to the top of Fox Hall some time in the next six weeks. Approved by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) in February of 1992,—three years after a formal application was sent to the FCC—the move has been postponed until this summer, when it will probably be made.

According to Tony Janeczek, a 1976 University of Lowell graduate who works as a computer designer and now serves as an alumni advisor to WJUL, "[the facilities plant] never seemed to put [the transmission facilities move] at the top of its' priority list." However, with the September 5, 1993 deadline imposed by the FCC looming, Facilities has placed WJUL "at the top of their priority list," according to Janeczek, and are "moving on it pretty good."

Facilities is currently lining up a contractor, but Janeczek feels the September 5 deadline will still be missed. In the event the deadline is exceeded, WJUL can file for an extension, which is usually granted if, according to Janeczek, "work is in progress." "As long as [WJUL] is putting the pieces together, there should be no problem in getting an extension."

WJUL currently operates at 1700 watts with a "height above average terrain." The station will operate at 1400 watts from the top of Fox Hall, but will increase the height of their transmission facilities from the current 30 meters to 62 meters. This will translate into 62 percent greater coverage or 72 additional square miles. The station will now broadcast over an area covering 185 square miles.

The decrease in wattage is necessary to compensate for the added height. The non-commercial "college band" is more crowded than the commercial FM band. WJUL has to protect established coverage zones existing at similar frequencies. WJUL's frequency is 91.5; a pre-existing radio station at Phillips Academy in Andover operates at 91.7, requiring WJUL to limit the wattage they can send out in that direction.

Most major Boston radio stations, like KISS 108, who broadcasts from the top of Boston's Prudential tower, operate at 50,000 watts.

The increased range for WJUL will help new Program Director Scott Dolliver achieve his goal of returning the station to the status it once held as one of the top five college radio stations in the country.

"The moving of our transmission facilities is definitely going to help increase listener-ship," Dolliver said. The Program Director since March, Dolliver wants to format specific types of music into specific time slots; recent additions include a Jazz show and the airing of pre-recorded programs such as "The Other Side," and "The Big Backyard."

WJUL, which maintains studios in Lydon Library, will remain at the North Campus library despite the facilities move.

"Right now we are monitoring our production studios, so it looks like we're going to be [at Lydon] for a while," Dolliver stated.

A day in the life...

by Ryan Tucker

It wasn't a horror story. It was even scarier. It was the truth. The myth is saying, "AIDS, it won't happen to me." The truth is knowing that anyone can catch AIDS.

Thus was the message behind the play held last Wednesday night's entitled, "A Day in the Life..." Sponsored by the BRIDGE Committee (Building Respect In Different Groups towards Each other), this play was the brainchild of Chris Felton, Henry Lewis, and Terri Pastori. Their goal was to tell the story of an average college student who catches AIDS.

While not a story of any individual person, what happens is all based on truth. As Lewis puts it, "These are things people actually go through. We wanted to show that for every statistic, there is a story."

While only lasting 25 minutes, the play was still able to send, "a powerful message to students," said Pastori. "It was a unique presentation."

Felton believes AIDS to be underexposed. "This play should help to stop the, 'it won't happen to me' philosophy."

The cast included Matt Drouin as Carl, who is that anyone who catches AIDS. Peter Charbonneau was Carl's con-

As far as anyone who saw the play is concerned, the message was clear and well taken, as the cast was called back by a standing ovation. People left the performance, some in tears, others reflecting on their thoughts. For better or worse, everyone had some sort of reaction.

Jill Pullen reacted to the play by saying it was, "outstanding. I can't put it into words. It scares you into reality."

Others like Dante Varrasso agreed that it was, "excellent and sent a great message. It was a quick play, but in that short period of time it captured the moment. The sadness Trish Annese's character portrayed at not being more kind to her son before he died was touching."

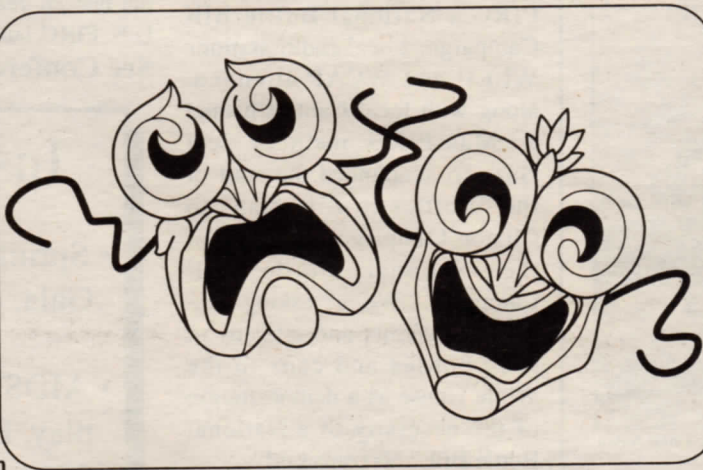

Also in the audience was Nikki Bennett, a teen councillor at the Health Works, which is a family planning clinic that helps promote AIDS awareness. Every Wednesday night at dinner time in the Fox Cafe, the clinic will be handing out free information and condoms in their effort to educate students with "fact or fiction" on AIDS.

science. Dave Mahoney played the Doctor.

The Defense Lawyer and Prosecutor we played by Andrew Scribner-MacLean and Jacques Dessin respectively. Eric Smith, Scott Smith, and Tracy Greskovic were the three Jurors.

Heather Prest played the character of Beth, Gregory Rushton-Karasawa played Dad, and Trish Annese played Mom. Robert C. Miller played the role of the Priest.

The audience reaction was more than anyone had hoped for.

REDUCE, REUSE AND RECYCLE CAMPAIGN in the 102nd Congress, the beverage industry, led by multinational giants such as Coca-Cola, Anheuser Busch, Phillip Morris, and Pepsi Cola, had, for the last two decades, successfully, prevented debate or votes on this issue.

Nazzaro further commented, "In waging this campaign, we are presenting President Clinton with a tangible reminder of his Earth Day, 1992 call to enact a National Bottle Bill as one of his key environmental initiatives." MassPIRG volunteers time to wipe out hunger and homelessness at 9th annual event.

By Alex Maycock
Connector Staff

On April 17, 1993 UMASS-Lowell and Middlesex Community College[MCC] students volunteered their time and energy as part of the Hunger Cleanup. About 20 students from both above mentioned colleges were working on that Saturday at four different work sites, House of Hope, Pawtucket at Merrimack House, The Open Food Pantry and The Greater Lowell Food Pantry, with the dual purpose of completing community work service projects and raising money for the hungry and homeless. The MASSPIRG Hunger Cleanup was apart of the Ninth Annual Hunger Cleanup, sponsored by the National Student Campaign Against Hunger and Homelessness, a project of the Public Interest Research Groups(PIRGs). Jennifer Coken, Director of the National Student Campaign Against Hunger and Homelessness feels that, "The Hunger Cleanup is a wonderful opportunity for students and community members to work together to end the problems of hunger and homelessness." Steve Panagiotakos, State Representative, attended the press conference on April 17 and supported the effort made by the students to make a difference. "I hope next year there will be many more volunteers to take part in this event," he said encouragingly. Robin Flynn from MCC coordinated the whole event and would like to thank the following businesses, which donated to the Hunger Cleanup: Trinity Ambulance Service, O'Connor & Hill Hardware True Value, Gagnon's Hardware Inc. and MCC President Carole Cowan. Brother George, who is in charge of the Greater Lowell Food Pantry, gave the volunteers who wept the floors and cleaned up at the Pantry, a short tour of a small part of the acre. The four volunteers working at that site were overwhelmed by what they saw just behind the Food Pantry. "This is the place where they do drugs", Brother George informed the volunteers. Fox Hall is maybe half a mile away from that site, hard to believe that these two complete different places are only separated by a canal and few people probably ever saw what it's really like "over there" in the acre, leave alone want to know.

50% of the money the students from MCC and UMASS Lowell will benefit the hunger and homeless in Lowell and the other 50% will go to the NSCAHH to split between domestic education and training programs, and international efforts to end hunger. Everybody who participated at the Cleanup agreed: It's a blast, and they made a difference!

Northern Essex Community College hosts Earth Day festivities.

by James A. Kimble
News Editor

MassPIRG wasn't the only organization waving their flag for environmental correctness this past Thursday better known to many tree huggers as Earth Day. Northern Essex Community College (NECC) hosted one of their largest public Earth Day celebrations. Several contributors such as the Haverhill Literacy Club, the Cousteau Society, and MassPIRG with their 'collect cans for Clinton' campaign were in attendance. The day's activity began with musical numbers performed by an a capella group the Moonbeams and a classic rock band Out of the Blue. Generous donations from local businesses supplied prizes for a fifty-cent raffle. Prizes ranged from an exquisitely framed Ansel Adams print of The American Wilderness to a gift certificate to Ronaldo's Italian Restaurant at Hampton Beach. The NECC Student Senate, co-sponsors of the event were pleased at the student turnout. Mark Foines, Vice-President of student senate commented "I sold tons of raffle tickets and the cafeteria was packed by 11AM. The band that played was much better than the usual ones that come to campus." Meanwhile downstairs a two hour gameshow entitled 'We Can Make You Laugh' was enjoyed by both contestants and audience. The object of the game was to keep from laughing at the host under a grueling six minute deadline. Winners received $25 cash and T-shirt with the game show logo. If one became famished from participating in all of the day's activities the NECC lunch menu consisted of Tropical Chicken, Ben & Jerry's Rainforest Crunch, and delicious Hazelnut Creme coffee. Proceeds of both the raffle and lunch went to support the day's events.

William Harold, Special Events and Gallery Coordinator happily explained, "All of the events and information are free to the students. We advertised the event in every major newspaper in the area with the exception of the Boston area papers." Since this is vacation week for all Massachusetts public schools many parents brought their younger children who enjoyed free kites and a few of the life size animals such as Peter the Parrot. Also there was a showing of the Disney movie Ferngully which contains an environmental theme concerning the destruction of rainforests. For the more serious environmentalists slideshows and lectures were held throughout the campus into the afternoon and early evening. The Earth Day celebrations were entertaining, informative, and ultimately a success. For those who never do anything on Earth Day, the NECC events are definitely worth marking on your calendar for next year.

Intolerable Proposal

Forget about the money. None of us average Jills and Joes has a million dollars anyway, except that guy who winged in a 3/4 court prayer at Chicago Stadium last week. In this country, where yesterdays bad novels give us today's avenues of escape via film, "Indecent Proposal," the nation's top-grossing film, is posing this month's soul-searching question.

"Indecent Proposal" is at best an average film that has the entire country squawking over whether they would or wouldn't (come on). Based on a sex-for-money proposition, the movie achieves one objective: marketing women and sex.

In a Massachusetts city far away from Hollywood, a young woman is seeking to escape "indecent proposals." She hears them all the time, she says, and with no million dollar incentives, $5000 dresses or piano-manned yachts. Her clothes, like her emotions, run in color from vibrant to black. She wears a lot of black. A black denim jacket over a black body suit; multi-colored striped pants held up by an impossibly wide black, leather belt. Her fashion statement carries the weight of a life with a splash of color mixed like the metaphors in this sentence onto a palate of black. She is crying out for escape—for fun, enjoyment or simple peace. The sentiment prevails from the blond-streaked mop of curls on the top of her head, to the hard, shiny shoes with the thick, rubber soles she wears on her feet. Her shoes are black.

Her name is Jen. It could easily be Lisa, Donna, or Jane. She is twenty years old and has a three year old daughter. She is not, nor has she ever been, married. She is a creative, intelligent art student at a community college. She writes horror fiction and poetry. She has very little in this world except for her daughter. She also has a tiny, crescent-shaped scar below her left eye—a permanent record of the night her daughter's father pushed her face through a window pane.

Jen's daughter is the one good thing left from the abusive, violent relationship that produced her only child. She loves her daughter, but she is still weary of members of the opposite sex.

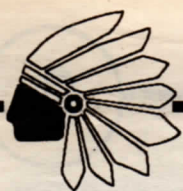

While caring for her child, pursuing an education, and earning a few extra bucks waitressing, Jen tries to remember what it should be like to be twenty years old and in college. She is tired of ruthless come-ons and feeling obligated to politeness so that she can feed her kid with the succession of nickels, dimes and quarters she peels off of sticky tables. She wants freedom from insults, from degradation, from "indecent proposals."

Jen is a victim. A victim of sexual harassment, mental abuse, and senseless physical brutality. Though she often feels it, she is far from being alone. A disturbing amount of women in the United States endures abuse at the hands of men—husbands, boyfriends, bosses, strangers. To many of these women, seemingly simple "advances" turn frightening and offensive. Jen is one of those women.

On a Friday night, after a preposterously long day of taking classes and classlessness, a male customer entreated Jen to a simple cup of coffee. But the invitation carried further connotations.

Jen has become so used to simply being taken, or shoved, or pushed through glass, that the inappropriateness of this particular "indecent proposal" was more than insignificant to her. These types of things occur every day, every minute, every second and more now that spring is here and women wear shorts and skirts and are leered after and stared at some more and they want it that way, don't they? well, yes, probably, a lot of the times, and, no, not really, not at all, a lot of the times. It is very difficult to gauge when is the appropriate time to "offer" oneself to members of the opposite sex, so, if in doubt, don't do it. Since hypocrisy can be as tricky as sexual interaction sometimes is, innocence will not be claimed here.

She is a woman, a person. Her name is Jen. It could be Debbie or Karen or Susan or...

Guns serve one cause: To put a bullet in a person's head

(GPX) No one buys a handgun unless he plans at some point to put a hole in somebody's head.

Oh no, people claim, we buy them for protection.

Well, a gun certainly cannot be used in place of a condom, so protection means putting a bullet inside somebody else's body.

It takes a lot of intestinal fortitude to spill the intestines of someone else. I don't think most gun owners really plan to shoot someone.

They get a gun with that same reckless abandon that people who buy baby alligators possess, not realizing that there is a dormant dangerousness just waiting to grow.

My ex-stepfather had guns. He said they were for protection because he was a business owner.

I always kept it in mind that he was a gun owner. I never sneaked into the house late at night. I would rather blantly enter at 4 a.m. and get chewed out for curfew violations than sneak in and get snuffed by a .45.

His son forgot his key and tried sneaking in once. He was not in trouble or anything, he just did not want to wake the folks.

He woke the dog. The dog woke the folks. Still in a sleeping daze, the stepfather saw a dark figure at the sliding glass door. He reached for his gun, but it was across the room.

He charged the door, but the figure didn't move. Before he could get his gun, his son identified himself.

If the figure had been an escaped serial murderer, the stepfather would have been dead. If he would have had his gun immediately handy, thus able to fend off the homicidal shadow, his son would have been dead.

Everyone, get a gun today. Your family needs it.

If the father doesn't get the kids, they might just do it themselves. Better yet, they will probably shoot their friends.

Mr. T shoots at bad guys and nobody dies. Why not pop Billy? Dad said don't play with the gun, but he also said don't play with Fido's food, and we all know how much fun that is.

So there we are, one dead Billy, one emotionally shredded child with a smoking gun, a father who wishes he would never have purchased that panacea for societal fear, and horde of murderous bad guys unscathed.

I am told, [that guns] should not be banned because everyone has a right to bear arms and there is a macho redneck contingent that likes to collect paramilitary weapons.

Fine.

Gun owners should be held responsible, within reason, for whatever happens if the trigger of the new toy is pulled — no matter who pulled it — including the kids.

Owners should have to take a training class that teaches them that the weapon they are purchasing is produced solely for the purpose of putting a hole in another person's head.

Do not buy it if you are unable to do so. Be very careful with it if you are.

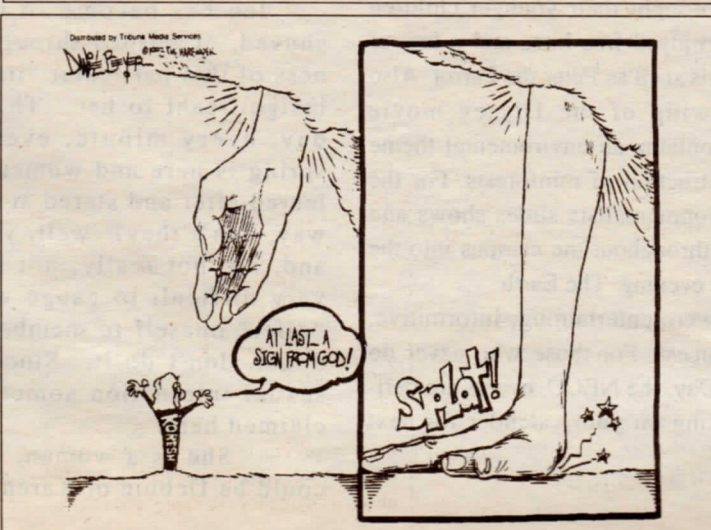

The class should also teach potential gun owners how to avoid their own heads, as well as the noggins of friends, family, and innocent passerby.

Better yet, the class should teach them that if they pull a gun on a criminal, they are just as likely to be shot by that gun as to nail the bad guy.

All gun salesmen should be required to tell prospective customers that their money could be better spent on a Nintendo. A video game is cheaper, a better way to interact with the family and allows one to shoot all the bad guys a male ego could desire without the guilt or mess.

Revolution...

Column By Stephan Anstey

I am not irate because a religious fanatic torched himself. I am sick that 83 others followed him to his grave. As sick as the man was, I am forced to ask if that is the whole story?

No.

David Koresh believed that he was God. I do not believe he was, but it really doesn't matter what I believe. More than a hundred people believed him; it was their religion. They were accused of being a cult. I don't think they qualified. Generally a cult must have some form of secret rites, secrete initiation, or in some way make themselves unavailable to outsiders. As far as I have heard, Koresh disclosed his religion in its entirety, and made no secrets of any of his bizarre rites. It is important for the distinction to be made. If it was a cult then it wasn't legal. It is also important to realize that Koresh must be assumed innocent of this charge, unless proven otherwise in a court of law. But, a religion that doesn't interfere with the rights of non-believers is protected by the first amendment. There is nothing illegal with being immoral, amoral, mean, evil, cruel, or fanatic.

Second, Koresh was known to have a huge arsenal of Automatic and semi-automatic firearms. Did you wonder how the authorities knew? They knew because he had registered them, and gone to the trouble of getting a license to use them.

What was the warrant they were using to assault his compound? It wasn't for child abuse, it wasn't for his religion, it was for illegal firearms.

That seems odd to me. Why would a man that had gone to all the trouble to get the proper paper work be assaulted like this? Obviously he was at least trying to be a law abiding citizen, so why send in so many troops? Wouldn't it be logical to just send in two or three guys with the search warrant and knock on the door politely?

Maybe I seem crazy to you but I have a big problem with this. I have a big problem because Koresh had, up to this point, a perfect record and yet he was treated like a man that had killed a dozen people. Meanwhile in Ohio, a bunch of prisoners got all their demands, these are convicted felons, and they were treated better than Koresh. I suppose Koresh must have been crazy to take the 83 others with him. I am no big supporter of Koresh, 14 children are dead because of him. I don't have a heart big enough to forgive that. On the other hand, if I had lights glaring in my windows 24 hours a day, and loud noise blaring through my head, and a few dozen FBI agents aiming guns at my doorstep, I might not be so coherent after 51 days. Particularly if all of the sudden a tank flying a confederate flag was about to burst through my front door, and a bunch of canisters of gas were hissing in my living room. It seems to me that even an idiot could tell that something terrible would happen if those tactics were employed.

Koresh was dead wrong. 84 people are dead because of it. But the government is wrong too. Their actions are inexcusable. The people of this country trust their government to enforce the laws of the land objectively. This means without regard for the personal feelings towards any individuals or their beliefs.

There is no doubt about it, our government has abused the trust we have invested in it, and it is time we served justice. Our nation was created with the supposition that when a government no longer serves and represents its people, the people have a right to revolt.

The shambles that remain of our once proud nation, lead me to the conclusion that we are headed for a revolution. I don't say this as treason, I say it as fact. The government that is supposed to be representing us, is taking advantage of us, abusing us, and mocking us. It is stealing our hope, leaving us only despair and fear. A once bright future is dimmed by questions of morality, of tolerance, of justice, and of reason. We are sheep being hoarded by the wolves as signs of power. We are chips in a giant poker game. It isn't funny, it isn't right, and there is nearly nothing we can do about it.

There has been talk of empowerment, it is jargon for "If you shut up we'll listen to you." (???) Empowerment is what the politicians want for minorities, it is the feeling that they can accomplish something, even if they can't. I abhor guns, but let me say this, the only real empowerment that any of us have is money, weapons, or hostages.

Money can buy votes. Money can buy the corporate juggernauts that run the country. Money is the mothers milk of politicians, and without it we can't control them.

Weapons are protection from the nightmare that we call the inner-city. Weapons represent brute force. weapons are a hideous answer, and they aren't a solution to the problems that are tearing this country apart.

Hostages aren't only human prisoners. The people of this country can hold goods, services, and cooperation as hostages. There is no reason we should cooperate with the government. It isn't working for us therefore it is working against us, and should be destroyed.

At this point we are broke, unarmed, and alone. Unless some serious changes come very soon, I am afraid that our civilization is on the verge of collapse. There is a size that is just too big. Our government is fast approaching that size. It is the size where Joe and Jane average are no longer politically viable, and there vote makes no difference at all.

It is the size where Black, Jew, Muslim, Religious right, are more meaningful than Mr Jones. Mr Jones can be all these things but his opinions don't matter unless he is an endorsed leader of one of these politically recognized groups.

I am not calling for a revolution. I am merely stating the fact that we are on the verge—unless there is some drastic change.

OPINION

Is this the America you want?

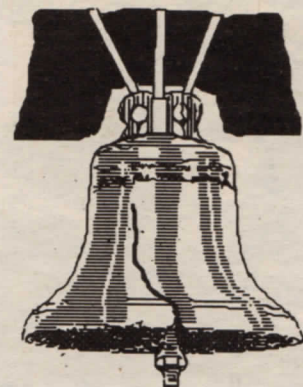

A Response to
M. Macomber's
4-12-93
editorial

"I've noticed that many students around campus have a relatively ignorant attitude about homosexuals." I agree that many students have ignorant attitudes around campus as well. I also believe that you are blinded by your own ignorance. Your question of "Can we not just have some mutual respect?" is a good one. What is your answer? From your editorial the answer is quite clear.

You ask for mutual respect yet you are not willing to give it. The issue of homosexuality is not a gender issue, and furthermore, gender should children through segregate parenthood, adoption, or even in vitro fertilization, and do a wonderful job raising them. Do you think that homosexual individuals do not want children? Do you think we can't have children? Do you think we are not capable of raising them? And you think you don't understand homosexuals!

I have just as much right to use the bathroom as you do-so please don't flatter yourself. I assure you that I have no desire of looking at your ass. Most homosexual individuals feel more uncomfortable in these situation than you do, and most homosexuals avoid them. In a society where appearance has such a large price tag most people - whether heterosexual or homosexual - try to fit in. Can you honestly say you have never looked at another male's the male population still does!

"When it comes to public affairs," I have just as much right to them as you do, especially marriage. If a church believes in gay marriages, why shouldn't they be married? Why should I be denied the right to get married to my partner just because you are not comfortable with it? Don't worry, whether or not the wedding is held in your church, you won't be invited! Don't all homosexuals, or anyone for that matter, deserve the right of a human rather than a "gay" or a "black" or a woman?"

As far as homosexuals in the military, let me ask you one question. Should people of color be allowed to serve in the military even though it makes the other soldiers uncomfortable? It is a civil right to be allowed to have the same opportunity to join the service. I agree that the service is selective, but everyone should have the same rights to be selected. This question was asked less than fifty years ago. Is this the type of America you want? As an American, I have the right to fight for what I feel are my rights and the rights of any other human being. These rights are that all mankind should be treated equally, whether or not you agree means nothing to me. I am not "forcing" my lifestyle on anyone because I know what it is like to have a heterosexual lifestyle pushed on me. What I do ask for is respect, not understanding. Respect to be allowed to walk down the street, to go to school, to have a family, to get married, and to live as the truly unique individual God intended me to be. Just remember, when your rights are being infringed upon because you are white, or male, or heterosexual, or skinny, or fat, or tall, or short, I will personally be there to fight for your HUMAN rights.

ULTRAVIOLET

—Sean Bradley

Do you have to hate your Brother?
Just look around, he's just like another.
A mental predicament dam busted.
Society pays in many ways.
Do you have to hate your Sister?!!
'Seems to me a she is a she.
It's not genetically, but phonetically transferred,
Generation to generation it's occurred quite absurd,
Rather down right disgusting!!
I know there's people on both sides of the Hate Wall
Trying to tear it down, like the Communist Wall,
But this wall's foundations —
Were set with the dawning of mankind.
I know there's people on both sides
That will use any means of conceivable ammunition
To overcome the powers that defend the Hate Wall.
Well, I stand for a True man
A frame of mind with social context
A society character that sees Ultraviolet
There's no colors here, they don't exist.
No hatred for mankind just grateful for mankind!
So now it's a struggle — more so a battle.
Train the minds — break the chain.
Here me on the other side of the Hate Wall,

"I don't respect their sexuality and I don't understand it."

— reprint from April 12, 1993

I've noticed that many students around campus have a relatively ignorant attitude about homosexuals. I heard one kid say, "All queers should be executed!" Can we not just have some mutual respect?

The issue of homosexuality in our society is not as complicated as it might seem. For me, it is helpful to think of it as a gender issue. Each gender has its set of not so specified rights, responsibilities and distinctions. For instance, men and women do not share the same restrooms; the man wears the tux and the woman wears the wedding gown; for obvious genetic reasons, the woman give birth and the man does not. The list could be expanded infinitely.

Some would argue that these distinctions are wrong and I commend them for that argument. Whether the general values of society are right or wrong can and will be argued forever. For whatever reasons, things are the way they are. I didn't write the rules and neither did you. We must face reality and deal with it in a practical sense.

Of course, we get a curve ball thrown at us with respect to homosexual issues. Where do they fit in to the scheme of things? From a psychological standpoint, what gender are they? Am I, as a heterosexual going to relate to them as I would to a man, a woman, a homosexual, a freak, a neuter person, a person, a hero, or any combination thereof?

We should all just love each other right? Yea sure, but its not quite that simple. I am a man. Most women would be aggravated if I violated their privacy by walking into a public restroom, especially if I exhibited a typical male chauvinist attitude by staring at their asses. Hey, what can you say, its just the social norm. Privacy is privacy. By the same token, I'm not sure I want a homosexual staring at my ass in the men's room. Call me homophobic if you want, but keep your sexuality out of my face, unless your a woman (I happen to be one of the few men still interested in women).

I'm not trying to condemn gays. People should do as they please in their private lives. But when it comes to public affairs, homosexuals should respect the rights of heterosexuals and vice-versa.

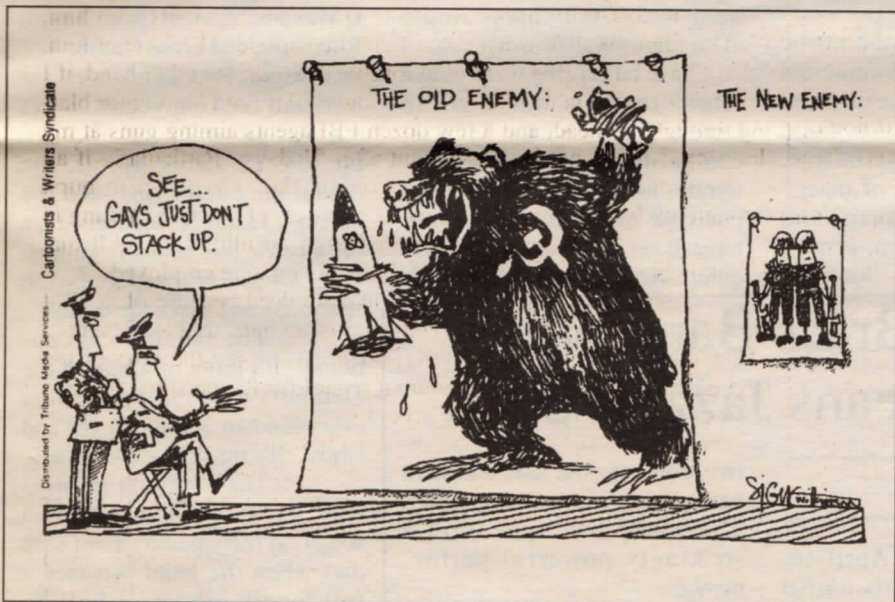

A good example would be gay marriages. I agree that the law should recognize gay marriages, but why should any church marry two men or two women when the doctrine of that church states that homosexuality is immoral. This is America. If you happen to think that being gay is wrong then fine. Gay men and women should form their own church. They could call it The National Holy Homosexual Church or whatever. A unified effort of this kind would force the law to change. They could then do whatever they wanted without having to walk down the aisle of my church. Problem solved.

Another good example would be gays in the military. Many gays are in the military. The real issue is: should they be allowed to be open about it? Of course not. It would surely be in their best interests not to be open about it. Really this is not the point anyway. The point is: A woman would never tolerate a man in the shower with her at a military base. Why should heterosexuals be forced into personal and private situations with known homosexuals?

I am proud of the homosexuals that serve our country in the armed forces. If we're going to let them be open about their sexuality, then we need to have separate barracks. Are we willing to change the entire military so that gays don't have to go by the military code of keeping their sexuality to themselves? Or are we going to force heterosexuals to room with open gays? If anybody has better alternatives I'd like to hear about it.

Several of my relatives are gay and I respect them for who they are. I don't respect their sexuality and I don't understand it, I certainly don't think I should try to figure it out. I don't have a problem with anything homosexuals or heterosexuals do as long they are happy and they don't force it on anybody.

never be an issue. Regardless of your sex you should be treated as a human being who is capable of many things. The qualifications for one to do a job, task or whatever, should not be decided upon their gender, but rather can they do the required task. If a man can cook or sew better than his female counterpart, and the woman be a better mechanic than the man, wouldn't it be much more effective for them to do what they do best rather than selling into a gender stereotype.

Your reality is also a distorted one. What right do you have to label anyone, and why would you want to? How should I, as a homosexual, relate to a heterosexual who ponders whether homosexuals should be labeled as a "neuter person"? What exactly is this? I do believe you are trying to say that homosexuals can not have and/or raise children. How wrong you are if you think that. There are many gay couples within our society that have clothing or hairstyle and think that maybe you would like to have that coat or pair of sneakers, or yes, even that muscular build? To try to categorize "looks" between two people of the same sex as homosexual is the same as trying to say all people who own pets engage in sex with them.

I will promise to keep my sexuality "out of your face" if you do the same for me. As a homosexual I must live in a world where every advertisement is geared to heterosexuality. I see only heterosexual couples on television. I am assumed heterosexual unless I tell people. When I politely turn down a request for a date or a dance by saying "Thank you, but I'm gay," I am not putting my sexuality in their faces. I am treating them with the respect they deserve as people.

On behalf of all my heterosexual male friends, I assure you that there are many men who still like women in a sexual way. Ninety percent of

This is an Art Attack!

Spring Carnival Info!!

What you will soon witness has never been done before! Once you see it, you will never forget it! You will tell a friend and words will fail to explain it! It is unparalleled. It is an artistic revolution. It is Denny Dent & his two fisted art attack. The only real rock 'N'

Denny Dent doing what he does best.

Roll Painter in the world today!

Armed with three brushes in each hand "Dent" is invading the colleges and universities of America, causing a cultural explosion.

He has perfected his live performances and appeared coast to coast with many headlines. In concert, Denny is introduced by an announcer preparing the audience to "Experience a unique new art form combining music, dance and paint." Denny then appears center stage with a blank canvas. As you hear the music of a selected superstar, Denny Dent creates a masterpiece in moments before your eyes in the length of time it takes to hear a few songs. The effect is magnetic. The audience is on the edge of their seats wondering if he can put the last brushstroke on before the last note of the song. He always does. Then, just as the audience is asking themselves, "Did he really do that?", Denny blows them away by doing his second and third show.

As a performer, Denny exudes high energy, excitement and enthusiasm through his showmanship. He has performed at the 1983 US Festival, the 1984 Olympics and appeared in concert with such diverse acts as Neil Young, David Bowie, The B 52's, Miles Davis, Stevie Wonder, the Cure, Stevie Nix, The Bangles and many, many others. Denny also performs in the 1986 Jimi Hendrix Video "Johnny B. Goode."

Madcap Laughs - Dear Jane / Wallflower

by Ian Underwood
A&E Editor

Remember when it was called Rock 'n Roll? Today it's just called "Rock", but whatever happened to the "Roll?"

Nowadays, the music we call our own has countless numbers of trendy terms and names like grunge, ska, funk, rap, thrash, and alternative. Remember the days of disco? Think about back then, and think about where disco is now. It was abandoned. And the question is will the music audience abandon these other trendy types like disco?

The Madcap Laughs bring the "Roll" part that has been ignored in today's music and made it a category of their own with their latest single "Dear Jane/Wallflower".

To appreciate what "Roll" really is, we've got to have a definition for it! Roll can be defined as the not-so-trendy, here forever, for everyone type of music. It's history have been brief and generally quiet. Roll music contains the ingredients that both rebelling teens and their grandparents can agree on. IT's definitely something for everyone!

The Madcap Laughs are the fun trio consisting of Peter Linnane (a student here at UMass Lowell), Jason Robinson, and Greg Chase. For this single, Pete sings both the lead and backing vocals, plays the bass guitar, the electric guitar, the 12-string guitar, the organ, the tambourine, and the kazoo. Jason Robinson plays the electric and acoustic guitars. Greg Chase is the percussion specialist and plays the drums.

The music is exceptional! It's more of a mix of the elements of good music that everyone can get an ear for and enjoy. It's music for everyone!

The single is impressive! From listening to the two songs on the cassette, I am sure that when the band releases a full length album, it will be worth a purchase. The Madcap Laughs are talented without a doubt!

The single is currently available at Tower Records in Cambridge and WJUL has the single as well. It's worth checking out!

Rebirth Brass Band brings New Orleans Jazz to UML

by Ian Underwood
A&E Editor

On Friday, April 16, the Center for the Arts hosted the Rebirth Brass Band in Durgin Hall.

The band, from New Orleans, delighted the attending crowd with a high-energy dose of jazz, party style!

The band was now small crew either. The 8 piece band consisted of two trumpets, two trombones, a sax, a tuba, a bass drum, and a snare drum. The whole band put forth a strikingly powerful performance.

All eight members were extremely talented and each one of them got many chances to show the audience what they were capable of—lots of fun, energetic music!

The show was definitely an opportunity NOT to pass up!

Orin Scrivello, D.D.S. (Chad Row) terrorizes Seymour Krelborne (Alan Bratt) in Little Shop of Horrors.

The Players Take the Shop

by Ian Underwood
A&E Editor

The Off-Broadway Players have been known to do a decent job at entertaining the university body at UMass Lowell. Their latest effort, which opened last weekend, is "Little Shop of Horrors." But in the case of this play, decent is not an appropriate word.

INCREDIBLE! That's the only word that comes to mind when I think of the most recent performance of the players! The show I went and saw was nearly perfect in my opinion!

The play opens up with the opening number "Little Shop of Horrors", sung by Chiffon, Ronette, and Crystal, (Kerrie Bellurado, Amy Henderson, and Renee Hersee) who continue to pop up and sing songs throughout the play.

The first scene starts with Mr. Mushnik (Michael Tucker) yelling at Seymour (Alan Bratt) for knocking things over and breaking things. Audrey (Lisa Schurga) then came on stage to come to work at 2:00 in the afternoon, but with a big black eye from a fight with her boyfriend Orin Scrivello, D.D.S. (Chad Row).

Act one continues forward and goes through the sudden success of a small skid row flower shop, all due to a strange little plant which Seymour calls the Audrey II. In Seymour's travels, he finds that the plant that brings him success relies on the flesh and blood of humans. Giving into the plant, Seymour continues to feed it and it continues to grow and grow, until it is taller than six feet!

For anyone who has just seen the movie, act two is a real treat! Act two takes off where Seymour finds that the plant is too much of a burden to keep alive. The burden is more emotional because Seymour states that he just can't keep up with killing people.

However, the difference between the play and the actual movie is vast... but not being the kind of person to spoil a good surprise, I will leave it up to you to find out what the end is! <smile>

I must honestly say that my favorite actor in this play is Chad Row, who plays the insane dentist. I thought that his character was the most believable in the way that the character's attitude and style were portrayed.

I couldn't find a flaw in the music! The band played well and the vocals were in sync with the music. All the singing was on-key and was by no means an earsore.

The acting was well done also, and all the actors fit their characters very well and all are believable.

The play will be showing again on April 30, and May first! It is definitely something to see over the upcoming Spring Carnival weekend!

Fido Says

(GXP) Two youngsters tossed Ice T's Home Invasion down on the counter in front of the sales clerk. Televisions blared two dozen different channels, mothers pushed strollers while grabbing about "Beauty and the Beast" and the department store clerk told the two boys that they needed to show ID.

They were not pleased. That evil little parental advisory sticker cancelled an afternoon jam session featuring that bad new Ice T disc. They gave the sales clerk the evil eye, instantly transforming her into another authority figure in the army against youth.

One of the boys reluctantly picked up the disc and carried it back to its spot. So much for revolution.

I was next.

I felt defiant, but she didn't ask for my ID. She simply signed and said she was tired of mad kids.

Me too.

Home Invasion is profane pontification from a big kid filling a compact disc full of as many curse words as he can possibly mold into the semblance of songs. How clever. Please, pull my plug now.

Ice T used to rap intelligent things provocatively. A few of us paid attention to the intelligence, everyone else got caught up in the provocation.

A class clown who only knows how to get attention when he act up, Ice T upped the ante to get more attention (The last album had 54 curse words and we talked ab out violence, this time we will have 99 curse words and threaten your grandma). Now Ice T raps provocative things with a little intelligence. Very little.

Ice T began his musical career using R & B arrangements that were offset by his deep raps and intelligent lyrics focusing on self respect and brainwork.

Then, bands like N.W.A. began getting all kinds of attention for rapping about smoking bitches, killing cops and gang ganging. That spurred Ice T to remind everyone that he was a gangster first, and he released Original Gangster.

Following his return to gangsterhood he released his heavy metal debut with his band Body Count and everyone knows all the attention that got him.

Home Invasion touches base with the smooth groove of early Ice T music, but the decent musical content is overshadowed by every bad word Ice T's mother ever washed his mouth out for, paranoid delusions about the organized army out to get Ice T and his buddies and more cop killing stupidity.

C'mon Ice. At least be clever and think of another way to get on Charleston Heston's nerves. That cop killer stuff is old.

Fido Says: "We're heading down a familiar highway-the signpost up ahead reads: Andrew Dice Clay three miles, Two Live Crew five miles, Lenny Bruce seventy miles, exit for brains next right-where artists get caught up in their own controversy and become obsessed with provoking rather than creating."

Without breaking a sweat, the Butthole Surfers can make Ice T seem as harmless as toity paper in a thunderstorm. They disturb on a whole different level. They are the strangest band that ever existed.

Although the Butthole Surfers have toned down the dark, self-exploitive humor that propelled the band for so many years, the wierd, off-center feel remains.

Independent Worm Saloon sounds like an AM radio turned up too loud for its little mono speaker to handle with noises from a different galaxy bleeding into the songs.

As if Mr. Wizard went mad and began stuffing little children through a music grinder, the Butthole Surfers take pop rock and roll and slay it in front of its mother.

They killed the rooster.

Two years ago, it had seemed as if Capitol Records destroyed the Butthole Surfers with the major label debut Pioghd. Nobody gave an old shoe because it was so damn boring.

The Butthole Surfers had been a lot of things, but boring? A band that showed sex change operations backwards in concert so it looked as if a penis were being constructed turned boring?

It was a temporary thing. They got better.

Independent Worm Saloon proves that riding the sphincter waves is again challenging and fun. It smokes Elvis Presley's toenails when it wants to get high. Brash and vulgar, tender and gentle, it sways in the evening breeze and crashes when the bough breaks.

Fans looking for a gauge should know Independent Worm Saloon is nearly as good as the Butthole perfection from yesteryear: Locust Abortion Technician.

Non-fans should know: You are losers.

Fido Says: "It is the soundtrack to Eraserhead II The Psychedelic Years with a gnarled, coughed-up phlegm ball as the baby wrapped in swaddling clothes."

Spring Carnival

Day's Events

The week will kick off with a 30 minute fireworks display on the South Campus field. Tuesday's program will take place in the South Campus quad. There, Denny Dent will be performing his very unique "Two Fisted Art Attack" as the world's only true rock n' roll painter. One of Dent's paintings will be kept and displayed in the McGauvran Student Union Building. The illustrious Dave Binder will be performing in the South Campus quad on Wednesday afternoon. Binder, a UMass Lowell grad, has performed on college campuses around the country. Binder is a solo singer and musician and is well known for his crowd-pleasing sing-a-longs. Thursday night will certainly be a highlight, with Saturday Night Live's Adam Sandler performing in Cumnock Hall. Sandler, in addition to SNL, has been touring college campuses around the country.

Of course, let us not forget the finale, Spring Carnival itself. There are 45 clubs and organizations that have reserved space for booths at Spring Carnival. there will be everything from a car smash to a dunking booth, and hot dogs to barbecued beef. Novelty items will also abound. On the field will be an air volleyball court, the Moon Bounce slide, the infamous bungee run (the latest campus craze and first-born of bungee jumping), world class frisbee players willing give a few pointers, temporary tattoo artists, palm readers and tarot card readers. The carnival ride "The Spider" will also be premiering at this year's carnival along with the old swinging cages.

Accenting the day will be a two hour concert performed by The Wailers, the original backup band for reggae legend Bob Marley. Special guests will be the Chuckleheads and UMass Lowell's own Spingo Freen.

Your free student tickets will allow you access to all of the events mentioned above.

The Wailers

The Wailers Band

Aston "Family Man" Barrett - Bass
Junior Marvin - Lead Vocals & Guitar

Earl "Wire" Lindo - Organ
Andrew McIntyre - Guitar
Irvin "Carrott" Jarrett - Percussion
Earl Fitzsimmonds - Piano
Michael "Boo" Richards - Drums
Alvin "Seeco" Patterson - Percussion

While the Wailers Band's recent debut album "I.D." received a Grammy nomination, the origins of the group began over two decades ago. Bob Marley, Peter Tosh and Bunny Wailer shared the Loved FO U. S. Doowhoppers like the Moonglows and the Impressions, and formed a harmony group called The Wailers. In 1967, the upsetters, considered the best reggae band on the island became The Wailers back-up Band. The combination of the Wailers with the former Upsetters Aston "Family Man" Barrett on Bass and Brother Carlton Barrett on Drums (known as "Reggae's hardest Rhythm Team") created a sound which propelled them and reggae on to the international music scene.

In the 70's, after the Wailers split, Bob Marley, the Barrett Brothers, keyboardist Earl "Wire" Lindo and guitarist/vocalist Junior Marvin became Marley's Band, which was still called The Wailers. Along with the female backing vocalists the I-Threes and percussionist Alvin "Seeco" Patterson, they toured and recorded as Bob Marley & The Wailers.

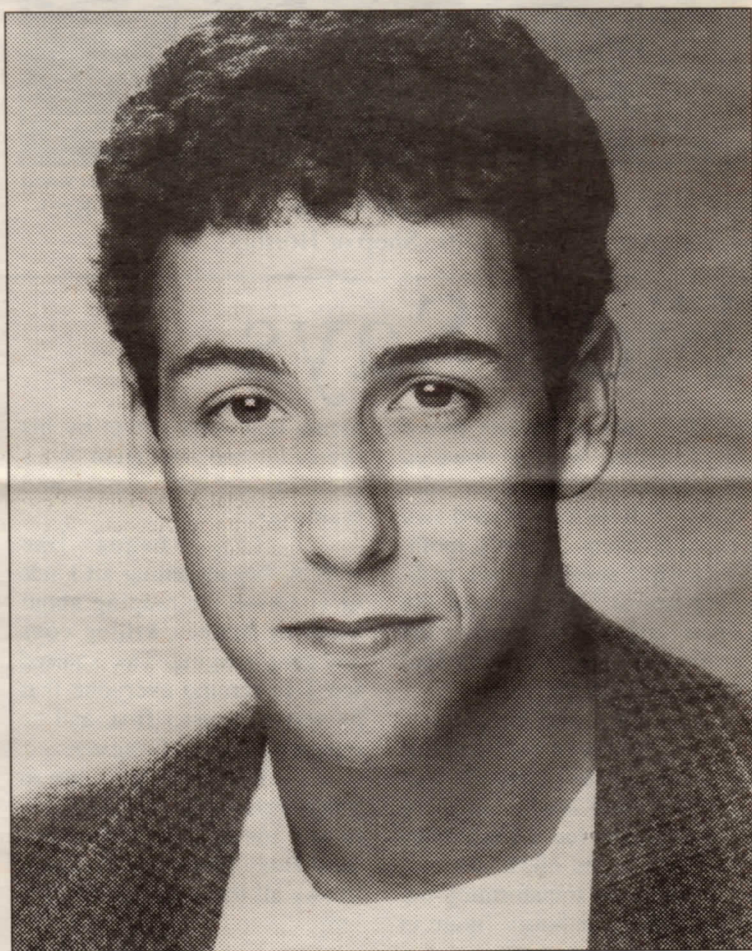

The Wailers band is a key piece of music history. Its work with Marley - which meant everything from writing and co-writing tunes to arranging - literally helped changed the way music sounds all over the world. Together, Bob Marley & The Wailers changed the face of popular music, bringing reggae to the ears and hearts of music lovers the world over. As Junior

Marvin recalls: "Right before Bob died, he said, 'Please keep the band together and concentrate on the quality of the songs.' So we began to build on the foundations we set up and to live up to his musical standards."

Live the band loosens up the grooves, they swagger and skank and develop the richly hypnotic textures that have made reggae a part of the every record producer's bag of tricks for the last decade and more.

On stage or off, The Wailers band make it clear that reggae has more than survived the untimely death of Bob Marley, towering figure that he was: It continues to reach people through the entertainment maze that is worldwide.

This collective band of world ranking musicians have so rocked the world with the strength and exhilarating power of their music that it is doubtful if there will ever be another band like them.

Your Final Exam

From Ford Motor Company

(answer true or false)

Included in the Ford and Mercury College Purchase Program are:

1. Pre-approved credit
2. Deferred first payment
3. $400 cash incentive
4. Down payment

(correct answers)

1. True 2. True 3. True 4. False

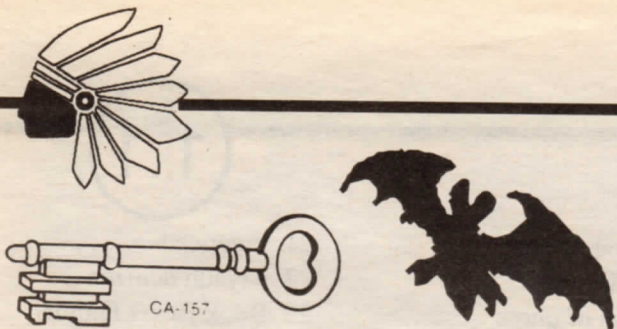

We made this exam easy to pass because getting a new car shouldn't be difficult. With the Ford and Mercury College Graduate Purchase Program, there's no down payment on eligible new Ford and Mercury vehicles if you qualify and finance through Ford Credit. You may even get the benefit of a deferred 1st payment (in states where allowed). You'll also get a $400 cash incentive regardless of whether you buy or lease. You can opt to use it toward your purchase or lease, or keep the cash.

You may qualify for the program if you earn a bachelor or advanced degree between January 1, 1993 and December 31, 1993, or are a graduate student enrolled during the same period.

Simply visit your local Ford or Mercury dealership or call 1-800-321-1536 for more information.

Making good on a campaign promise delivered at the University last fall, Congressman Marty Meehan, a graduate of ULowell's Political Science program, has made a paid summer internship available for a UMass Lowell student. The internship will be for a one month period running from June 14th through July13th. It will pay a stipend of $1260. The opportunity for a student to work in Washington this summer should be particularly exciting as Congress grapples with Health Care and other important Clinton Administration initiatives. Internship applications are available in the Coburn Hall 114 Secretarial Office, South Campus. Dr. Fred Lewis, Professor and Chair of Political Science will serve as University contact person for the internship opportunity; applications will be screened by a faculty committee. All students with a good academic record and strong interest in government and politics are encouraged to apply for this unique opportunity before May 8th.

For Your Information: Help Fight Campus Crime

We're back one last time with more crime information from Chief Rowe's office and the UMass Lowell Police Department. The articles we have written on campus crime were meant to let you know just how serious this issue is. We also want the students here to cooperate with the university police.

As we all know, crime is a fact of life and college campuses are no exception. University Police received over 8,000 service calls last year and an average of every 15th call was a reported crime. Out of all the reported crime calls, the university police made 66 arrests. Most of the crimes were against student and university property, not crimes against a person. A large percentage of the offenders were by no way connected to the university, and many of them had extensive criminal records. What we're getting at is that there is a LACK OF AWARENESS among the student body at UMass Lowell. Since most of these offenses are property crimes occurring during daylight hours, they are preventable. The students here definitely need to get involved. This does not mean going after the offender yourself. It means that each and every student needs to take notice of what's happening and needs to cooperate with university police.

As we mentioned in an earlier article, anything you think may be suspicious probably is! Don't hesitate to call UMass Police even if you're not sure that a crime has actually happened. So many more arrests would be made if the students quickly and promptly reported what they saw!

One last reminder: UMass Lowell University Police has many services available to the students. Know that not only is the police department willing to assist you, but so is library security, the escort service, the EMT's and the security officers in the residence halls. They are there to offer help if you need it!

National Youth Sports Program Booth Sponsored by Donahue Hall Spring Carnival 1993

National Youth Sports Program (NYSP) is a free five week, school enrichment and sport program for 250 economically disadvantaged youngsters from Lowell conducted on the UMass Lowell campus by many university staff and students. NYSP provides youngsters with meals, medical exams, enrichment programs, sports training and much more.

You can join with the residents of Donahue Hall in sponsoring the NYSP by:

- Buying Ice cream, or
- Purchasing a NYSP 25th anniversary t-shirt

during Spring Carnival. So be sure to stop by the booth, and make some child's summer a little brighter!!

Monies will be used to buy t-shirts and shorts for all NYSP youngsters

Sports Trivia Quiz Rugby Team Hits the Road

And last week's winner is..... B.J. Bottomley

UML comes up empty handed on their first road trip

Hello again sports fans. Congratulations go out to B.J. Bottomley, who answered all ten questions correctly and was the first to submit his answers. The runner up was Dan Weygand. Janice Laison, the first female contestant, came close with nine correct (#1 was Dick Howser!). The Theme for this week is Pro Hoops. I've tried to make this week's a little harder by adding a bonus question at the end. You must answer the bonus question in order to win. Same rules apply (same prize too!). If you don't know the rules, find an old Connector.... or ask a friend.

The Boston Celtic who was the 1957 Rookie of the Year.....

At the very first All-Star game in 1951, he was the Boston Celtic selected as the MVP.....

He was the Boston Celtic that was picked the 1981 NBA Playoff MVP.....

The first team to sweep the NBA Finals.....

Including play-off games, he was the NBA coach that retired with 1,037 victories.....

The NBA team with the most appearances in the Finals.....

This team is now the Los Angeles Clippers, and they were the San Diego Clippers, who were they before that?.....

The Boston Celtics have retired sixteen numbers to date. Can you name the corresponding player to these three retired numbers?

#1..... #21..... #22.....

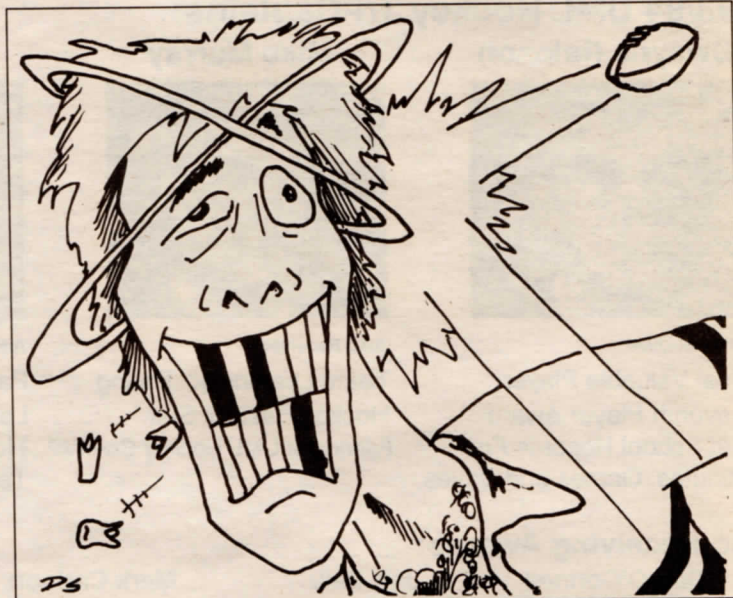

The Bonus Questions: "Loscy" is an abbreviation for what Celtic legend? What was his number? And Speaking of numbers, Bill Walton changed his number to five when he became a Celtic.... why five?

The rugby club had its first road game of the season last Saturday, April 17. The team traveled to North Adams State College for their match. The final results were a UMass Lowell loss 17-0.

The game was a mismatch from the beginning. The inexperienced Lowell players were outgunned by the older, more experienced North Adams club. North Adams scored their points early, including a score on the first play of the game. The second half was much more competitive when Lowell started to pull itself back together after being rattled early. The scoring summary was three tries and one extra kick for North Adams, no tries or kicks for Lowell.

The rugby club took a minimal traveling team to North Adams last Saturday. The RFC was able to field 17 players, only two more than the 15 players who started the game. The club would like to thank those who made the trip.

The young Lowell team has struggled through its first two games of the season this spring. Lack of experience can be blamed for this spring's poor showing. The rugby team hopes to improve their performance for the upcoming Spring Carnival game vs. Framingham State College. That game will be played late Thursday afternoon. Look around campus for announcements on the exact time and place that will be announced soon. There is no admission charge so come check out a rugby game to start spring carnival.
